

The Horse Music Festival

The Horse Music Festival in Sabula, IA was to say the least an interesting place. Held in a field, on the bluff's overlooking the Mississippi river is a newly built arena, that can hold hundreds of bikes and riders, where everyone can watch the full stage acts. Last year we seen Rick Derringer, The Georgia Satellites and many other local bands rounding out a full weekend of entertainment. The temperature was in the 90's all weekend so we made some time and scooted out of there and ran along the river up to Dubuque for some fresh air. Running down the Illinois side we ran through Historic Galena with it's very hilly streets and it's old flavor shops.

To me the Horse Music Festival is going to be a highly good time for all. Just like any new event it will take time to mature into it's own, but I am going to consider myself in the front row of something cool till then. For this years events check out www.thehorserally.com. On the inside of this issue is all the info for this years Memorial weekend event. Hang the whole ad up for all to see and take some time to attend.
