Who's been out riding this last month? Come on let's see those hands. Because if you haven't there is some serious issues with your thinking. Last weekend (October 10th weekend) in the high 70's and low 80's. What more do you need? Maybe I should come over and hand you a personalized invitation to go for a ride this fall season. Would that help? But seriously I've seen hundreds of bikes out and that always put's a smile on my face. I know when I feel like I am beating mother nature with no jacket on in October all I am is one big grin. But we all know the inevitable is around the corner. Which leads me into my next thought.

My job with this paper is to keep the riding community informed as to what is going on in the summer, and keep riders looking forward to spring while keeping their minds off of the, well you know, Shhhhh (white stuff) that we tend to have in the near future. This is what I did for 8 years, and pretty successfully I may add. But this year is different.

I tell everybody that my job title at the FRP is editor, delivery boy to janitor and the cool thing about all these titles that include owner is that any one of them can make an executive decision. So that's what this Dietician of well balanced nutrition (Ya right) for the FRP staff is going to do. We will be combining the next 3 issues.

I have a desire to work in my field of machining and a spot opened up in Milwaukee that gives me the opportunity, so there you have it in a nutshell. I am gonna take a break from the paper for the winter and go to work. (That really makes sense, huh?)

I don't need to tell you all that we have the best advertisers in the world that have been with us for years, and I fore see them going no place any time soon. So stop in and check them out during these cold months, I would appreciate it as much as they would.

To wrap up a great summer in just a few words would be cutting it off at the knees as they say. I went on a lot of runs and to echo what I say all the time, some of the best ones were Not on Saturday. In fact the two best ones as far as turn out and fun were on Friday and the other on Sunday. I will have more on these rides in the future, but I can say the Friday ride had about 150 plus people on it. The Sunday ride had around 90 riders, but this one was more of an old school thing. A blast from the past. One of them deals where numbers don't make it a success, the riders themselves with their certain attitudes do.

So until the Dec/Jan issue and more thoughts from my sometimes warped way of looking at the world, keep it low profile and for the heaven's sake don't get caught doing whatever it is you are accused of doing.

One last thought say a prayer for our troops and all veteran's on November 11th. It's Veteran's Day and I think it is well worth any effort we can put forth to thank them. As you can see in this issue, us bikers seem to do a pretty good job of saluting our hroeroes.
