

Life and Death

Sounds like I'm going to get gruesome, but I promise I'll try and not go to that area if at all possible.

As you all know I have been dealing with a Brother, more so a very good friend (Michael "Bones" Beaverson), who is dyeing of Cancer. This has been going on for some time now and we recently had a niece in Texas found dead (still don't know anything on that one). Any way I have been doing some heavy thinking in the past month or so which is harder, LIFE or DEATH.

In my sixty years of life I have seen more then anyone's share of death, there is no doubt in my mind on that. Growing up I saw my mother, who was a victim of childhood diabetes, which in later years put her on the life and death seesaw, it lead to heart decease, diabetic comas, numerous things to include being told she was going to loose both of her legs.

Mom had nine brothers and three sisters, all of who suffered with either heart decease or cancer and a couple with both. Back in their day kids would die of things like mumps and mescals which in itself is very strange.

The medical field has come along way since those days, but still nothing anyone can do about CANCER. Sure some people try to beat it, like Bones did, he thought he beat it with all the treatments, but it came back to bite him in the ass. This time it came back stronger and harder and there is no two ways about it HE IS GOING TO DIE!

I've gone up to Hospice at least three times a week for the last month and watched his family and friends, and the other guys on the ward family and friends suffer knowing there was nothing they could do, but pray. There comes a point when you have to change the prayers from wanting a miracle to asking that they be taken quickly and with out pain just so their suffering stops.

Bones daughter, son in law and myself had a long talk about a week ago about our prayers and all of us came up with the same conclusion, that it was time to change our prayers from asking for a miracle to asking God to stop his suffering and just release his soul from his earthly shell. We all realized we were being selflessly family and friends members and our earlier prayers were just prolonging his pain.

We made a page on Face Book called "We Love Bones - VNV M/C", it is open to the public, anyone can go on it and leave messages. Those of you from the Black & Red Nation please visit the page and let him know it is ok to start his journey to pass over and how much better it will be when he receives his new body, one without pain, cancer and the other earthly junk. Others that didn't know him and believe in what I've been talking about, you to are welcome to leave a message for him.

With all this and the death I saw when serving in combat over in Vietnam, I lost nine good men over there, some thing I will never forget. I must truthfully say LIFE is much harder to deal with, because in life you are dealing with people you love go through all the horrible deceases and suffering from other things like motor accidents and so on and you could be one of the people in life suffering from these things. Where as Death, you or they go to a new world that does not have all these Earthly pit falls. So yes I truly believe life is harder and death is easier.

I truly hope this article has not brought up sad memories for some of us, because that was not my intend to do that. If it has I'm sorry, I do know one thing I will always carry the memory of the good times Bones and I had together, he will always be in my Heart and Mind and as long as he is he will always be with me.

God Bless all of you, Bones family and friends, our Troops and our Nation. So until next month I will say goodbye and may the Great Spirit be with us all. " Keep on Triken' ". Love you all. Skypilot

Citizen Action of Wisconsin releases Consumer Watchdog Report: Wisconsin auto insurance industry mislead the public on rate increases

On September 16, 2010, Citizen Action of Wisconsin released a report indicating that the auto insurance industry's claim of a 33% increase in premium rates is grossly misleading.

Contrary to the industry claim that rates would increase by as much as 33%, 2010 auto insurance rates in Wisconsin increased less than 1% for the top insurers in the state. A national survey showed that Wisconsin premium rates remain the 4th lowest in the nation.

Wisconsin auto insurance companies remain profitable, 25% above the national average. They take in over double the profits that are taken in by the Wisconsin health insurance industry. In 2009, 40% of premium dollars went directly into the coffers of the insurance industry, for a total of $1.2 billion.

The Citizen Action report concludes that the insurance industry's claim of increased rates was carefully orchestrated to mislead lawmakers and the general public. If you want a copy of the full report, contact Tony Pan at Hupy and Abraham, S.C. and request it.
