

My dad had a love for Harleys all his life. In his younger years he owned a few of them, but as he got older he knew he would never be able to own one again. He was very satisfied to just admire everyone else's. He was really looking forward to the 100th anniversary of the Harleys in Milwaukee. Unfortunately he passed away before the event took place.

Two of his grandsons went to the celebration in honor of their grandfather. They brought and used Grandpa's camera to take pictures. This happened to be the same camera the family uses when they travel to the site where his granddaughter's body was found.

My dad always had a fear of dying, because he knew it was a journey he had to take alone. When this picture turned out like it did (the double exposure), we all feel that it is a sign from our dad that his with Cora and he is OK.
