

Summer Hummer 2013

Like normal, Lorie and I stopped in at the Hummers ABATE Acres to say hi to all the motorcycle rights freedom fighters that were enjoying a relaxing but wet weekend of music, friends and fun. This year mother nature deemed the music tent unfit and took it down with a storm on Thursday night. But in true biker spirit, everyone regrouped and continued the party with some great weather the rest of the weekend. I did run into Nate Ullrich (One of Easy Riders Magazine Event writers that was covering the party) along with all the regulars that I may only run into a couple times a year. It was great to see you all again.

With many vendors, full restroom facilities (including showers), food, music and mud, what more could a scooter tramp ask for. Besides the many vehicles that needed to be towed out, spirits were high. Although many left after the storm attendance seemed to be pretty good.

A short note about ABATE of Wisconsin. You may read a lot about them in the FRP, but I cannot emphasize the importance that this event and all the separate ABATE regions around the state do to raise money to fight for those of us that ride. Keep up the good work my friends...
