come. And if you need anyone killed, Rambo will take care of it."

Ellen laughed. "Yes, I believe he would."

"What more do you need?" He hugged her closer. "Stop crying. If you don't, you're going to get me going," he whispered.

"I can't help it."

He stroked the hair back from her face, his rough hands, tenderly wiping away the tears. Ellen relaxed, feeling safe for the first time in a long while. "Thank you for all you've done for me tonight. Considering I crashed your party, you've all been very nice. Well, except for Desi."

"Desi's usually cool, but she's got Rambo for a boyfriend. And Rambo, well he's Rambo."

"Do you think she's jealous of me?" Ellen didn't let him respond. "She's gorgeous. I'm so out of her league. So why the hostility? If my husband Paul had seen her dancing up there on that trailer, he would have thought he died and went to heaven. No pun intended."

Mad Dog yawned. "I think you underestimate your appeal, Mrs. Abrams."

A long silence ensued as Ellen considered Mad Dog's remark. Was it possible Mason was attracted to her as much as she was to him? The possibility made Ellen giddy, but she quickly dismissed it. No man would go for a woman like her, when he had Desi. Not in Ellen's life time.

"Mad Dog," she whispered.

"Yeah."

"I know you're tired, but do you suppose you could do me one more favor?"

"What is it?"

"Do you think maybe you could ..." Ellen hesitated.

Mad Dog propped himself up on his elbow, his dark eyes questioning. "Could I what?"

Ellen bit her bottom lip. "Do you think you could kiss me?"

Ellen looked away. "It doesn't need to mean anything. It's been so long since a man has kissed me, I worry if it'll ever happen again.... Sometimes I feel so old." Her voice quivered.

"Ellen, are you asking me for a one night stand?"

"Would that be so terrible?" She brought her hand to his bearded cheek. "I want you to make me feel eighteen again.... When dreams evolved and as kids we knew it all. Before autism... before death."

Ellen smiled slightly, catching a glimpse of deep understanding in his eyes.

Mad Dog moved over her.

Warm breath on her face, his strong frame surrounding her, she clasped her hands around his neck, surrendering to the moment.

"That's a tall order for one kiss," he whispered. "But I'll try."
